Sprint 1 – Individual Retrospectives (Kamogelo Mosehle)

Software Design

CI/CD & Deployment

What I Worked on: I designed and implemented the full CI/CD pipeline using GitHub Actions, configuring workflows that trigger on every pull request and push to main. I also provisioned and connected the Azure deployment infrastructure — Azure Static Web Apps for the frontend and Azure App Services for the backend, including service principal authentication and environment variables stored as GitHub Actions secrets.

What I Found Difficult: The hardest challenge was getting Azure SWA and App Services to communicate. SWA's routing and API proxy behaviour for custom App Services endpoints is poorly documented; I had to discover through trial and error how to even create the two apps because there's some region restrictions when using student account, so I changed to personal account.

What I Would Do Differently: I would maintain a deployment runbook in the repository from day one, documenting each pipeline step and secret, so teammates can diagnose failures independently without coming to me.

How It Fits the System: The pipeline enables the whole team to deploy automatically on every pull request & push to the main branch, meaning any merged PR is immediately live and testable — making every other team member's work shippable without manual intervention.

Frontend & Repository Setup

What I Built: I set up the GitHub repository, including the project structure and README files to give the team clear onboarding documentation. I collaborated with Nkosinathi on the Welcome Page design and implementation, and with Karabo Tlaka and Tjeding on the Sign-In and Sign-Up pages. I also worked with Nkosinathi to ensure routing between all pages worked correctly, and I designed and implemented the Modify Details Page.

What I Found Difficult: Coordinating design decisions across teammates working on different pages simultaneously was the biggest challenge. With in-consistencies in colours, spacing, and components only appeared at integration time, requiring mid-sprint rework. The main problem from my observations is lack of proper communication in the team.

What I Would Do Differently: I would start implementation earlier and spend less time deliberating over design upfront. I would also communicate more proactively — agreeing on a shared style guide before anyone writes UI code and holding brief daily check-ins to catch design drift early.

How It Fits the System: These pages form the application's entry point. The Welcome, Sign In, Sign Up, and Modify Details pages are the gateway to every deeper feature in the system — without them routing correctly, nothing else is reachable by the user.
