During this sprint, I focused on developing the project documentation and managing tasks using Trello, with my contributions reflected through the creation of the Project Plan, Sprint 1 documentation, and meeting minutes. I translated user stories from the product backlog into the Sprint 1 backlog and broke them down into smaller, actionable tasks, which helped structure the team's workflow.

Initially, I struggled with understanding how the different parts of the system fit together (especially how the things we are taught in lectures come into practice in the software development process), as well as how to effectively use Git and manage work on Trello. I had to revisit how Git works to ensure I could contribute properly and align with the team's workflow.

Through this process, I learned the importance of clear task breakdown, structured documentation, and effective use of project management tools.

I now have a clearer understanding of expectations and will contribute to UI design and frontend development in Sprint 2.
